SHORT

I studied computing and business management in college. After graduation, I worked office jobs and taught basic programming to college students. Teaching pushed me to learn more and break the boundaries. I love to challenge myself to learn new things. My experience as a programming tutor reflected me on my research skills, organizational skills and improved my learning techniques.

In January 2022, I decided to polish my programming skills to work as a web developer. I polished my basic algorithm knowledge and caught up on industry frontend libraries. In mid 2022, I started freelancing static website projects and after that I moved on to learning backend frameworks Flask and Express. Personal full-stack projects are developed and now I'm fully equipped with frontend and backend skills.
